These are Border Patrol camera images of the group that Agents tracked into the No More Deaths camp. Agents tracked this group through remote mountains for two days before the group entered the camp.

Two days might seem like a long time to track a group, but the area south of Arivaca is mountainous, rugged, and remote. Border Patrol Agents are experts at tracking people through these areas.

This remote area south of Arivaca is used extensively by the smuggling of people and narcotics. No More Deaths knows that too.

Not everyone we rescue or encounter is a good person. Notice the backpacks. We don't know what's in these backpacks. Agents often encounter narcotics smugglers with packs full of dangerous drugs, headed for our communities.
